Calvin C. Straub was born on March 16, 1920 in Macon, Georgia. His family moved frequently when he was young, at times living in Georgia, New York, and California. After graduating high school, he attended Pasadena Junior College in California and then Texas A & M University. Just before World War II, Straub married Sylvia Gates (1920–1974), a granddaughter of William Day Gates, founder of the American Terracotta company. During the war, Straub enrolled in the V-12 Navy College Training Program, which allowed him to finish his education while awaiting active deployment in the military. He earned a Bachelor of Arts degree in architecture from the University of Southern California in 1943 and deployed with the U.S. Navy the following year.

Following the war, Straub returned to California and accepted a teaching position at his alma mater, the University of Southern California, in 1946. He remained at the school until 1961, eventually becoming dean of the College of Architecture and establishing a successful architectural career as a partner in the firm Buff, Straub & Hensman, 1954-1960. His designs in California reflected both artisan and midcentury modern styles and became widely known through the architectural photography of Julius Shulman.

In 1961, Straub accepted a teaching position in the College of Architecture at Arizona State University and established his own architectural practice in Arizona. His work in Arizona was a bridge between the California arts and crafts architects and the desert modernists. While at Arizona State University, Straub authored the book The Man-made Environment: An Introduction to World Architecture and Design, published in 1983. He also travelled the world extensively for his world architecture lecture course, attended by over 12,000 students over his tenure at the university. Straub retired from Arizona State University in 1988 and died in 1998.

Scope and Content Note

The collection, which represents mostly residential projects, reflects Straub's design activities in both Arizona and California. It is comprised of 39 folders of drawings, 3 stacks of oversize panels, and four boxes comprised of textual records, plaques, and video tapes. The bulk of the collection consists of oversize materials, mostly construction documents including perspectives, plans, elevations, sections, and details organized by project sets in individual folders and arranged alphabetically by client name. Most of the drawings are pencil on vellum or ink on mylar, including some sets which are diazo prints. For some projects, oversize specification documents are included with the drawings. Of particular note is the photo panels series (Series Two) which includes photo prints of various Straub works. Most of the photos are the work of prominent architectural photographer Julius Shulman. Others are by Henry Hoag. The prints are generally mounted on boards that measure 40" by 40." A miscellaneous textual records series (Series Five) includes biographical information about Mr. Straub and his lengthy career. Some artifacts such as plaques are also contained within the holdings.

Provenance

The collection was donated to ASU’s Architectural and Environmental Design Library (now the Design and the Arts Library) in 1993 and 1995 by Calvin Straub.
